PRINCESS CALLING PRINCE

Princess calling prince
along the shore –
the waves we had forgotten
roll and roar.
Kings and queens inside
no time to fly –
their walls will soon be taken by the tide...

I watch the children hand in hand,
they're building castles in the sand.
They grow too tall
to see their towers fall.

*House of sorrow did we build you?
Where are all the faces that once filled you?
Dreams we lived you, did we lose you?
What will be remembered when we leave you?*

Princess calling prince
across the years.
A voice among the rollers
no one hears.
Sails across the skyline,
white on blue.
If only you were only
passing through...

I watch the ships as one by one
they chase their dreams across the sun,
and all is change
and all remains the same.

*House of sorrow did we build you?
Where are all the faces that once filled you?
Dreams we lived you, did we lose you?
What will be remembered when we leave you?*
